

The planetarium's next celestial poetry evening...

SOLSTICE DAWNING

Friday, December 18, 2009
7:00 p.m.

The Southworth Planetarium presents its next evening of celestial poetry on Friday, December 18, 2009 at 7:00 p.m.

Local writers read poetical works (theirs and of others) about the Universe, night sky, nature, love, the stars, and more. While they read, a variety of images will often appear on the dome to add a visual component to the readings.

We invite you to join us for a program of poetry under the stars.

The planetarium has three celestial poetry evenings each year: “Beltane Fires” (May 1); “Lammas Celestial Poetry” (August 1); and “Solstice Dawning.”

This event welcomes the onset of winter and all the beauties contained within it.

Admission by donation.
